Dear Chair Rogers and Ranking Member Cartwright:

As the undersigned national, state, and local organizations, we would like to express our strong support for the Second Chance Act to continue being funded at the highest possible level in the FY 2025 Commerce Justice Science Appropriations bill.

We are a diverse set of organizations from a wide range of sectors including law enforcement, business leaders, faith groups, state and local government associations, direct service providers, experts in the field of substance use disorders and mental health, civil liberties groups, organizations representing people with lived experience, and more. As a collective, we are acutely aware of the necessity and value of strong reentry services for communities across the nation, with resources for housing, childcare, career training, and treatment for substance use disorders. Over 95% of the prison population will eventually be released,¹ and each year, more than 600,000 individuals are released from prison, while an even higher number enter and exit local jails.²

In 2008, the Second Chance Act was passed with bipartisan consensus and signed into law by President George W. Bush, aiming to address the reentry needs of the large population reentering our communities each year from a term of incarceration. Reentry programs under the Second Chance Act have served over 442,000 people since the law was enacted,³ through more than 1,100 Second Chance Act grants⁴ that were administered to 845 states, local and tribal governments, and reentry-focused non-profit organizations across the U.S. states, territories, and the District of Columbia.⁵

By bolstering reentry programs and services, the Second Chance Act builds stronger families and communities through helping individuals successfully reenter society upon release from incarceration, thereby reducing recidivism rates and improving public safety. In the 15 years that the Second Chance Act has been in place, recidivism rates have dropped by 23% nationwide.⁶

Additionally, Second Chance Act grants have helped address the unique challenges of the continued substance use disorder and overdose crisis. With 65% of the prison population having a substance use disorder,⁷ and people released from prison being up to 129 times more likely to overdose within the first two weeks of release,⁸ Second Chance Act programs are urgently needed to provide communities with access to substance use disorder treatment, housing, employment, and other essential reentry services.

We are grateful for your longstanding commitment and leadership in ensuring that our communities are kept safe through responsible and smart initiatives, and we respectfully ask for your continued support of crucial Second Chance Act reentry programs in the FY 2025 Commerce Justice Science Appropriations bill.

Please do not hesitate to reach out to us if you have any questions. Thank you.

Sincerely,
